

Renée spent 35 years of her working life as a counselor and administrator in career planning and academic advising in three different universities. Since retiring, she has volunteered with the spay/neuter program for The Mosby Foundation and served on their board for several years; provided therapy dog visits to retirement centers, Hospice patients, and universities; and worked with the Social Justice Team at the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship in Waynesboro. She lives in Staunton with her husband and their rambunctious dog.
